Haiku 52 Deborah Howard

Memorable images. Strong insight. Exquisite language. Take a trip through the months of the year with this collection of seasonal haiku. In 2015, poet Deborah Howard set out on a challenge to write one haiku each week. The result is this collection of poems organized by the months and weeks in which they were written. Each poem tells a story of a moment in time. By distilling an experience down to three short lines, the poems are able to explore complex and universal topics such as nature, beauty, joy, and solitude. Each haiku reveals a keen awareness of the details of life that unfold before us as we journey through each day.
