Manners and Customs of the Japanese, in the Nineteenth Century: From the Accounts of Dutch Residents in Japan and from the German Work of Philipp Fran (Tut books. H) Philipp Franz Von Siebold

"There is no people with any claims to civilization of whom so little is known as of the Japanese. Their policy in regard to foreigners is even more jealous and exclusive than that of the Chinese; the Dutch being the only Europeans allowed to trade with them, and their intercourse being extremely limited, and subject to severe restrictions. Within the last two or three years several publications have appeared in Holland, by members of the Dutch factory, descriptive of the institutions, characters, of that most singular people. These, however, have not been translated, and this is the first attempt to present to the English or American reader a compendium of the curious and interesting facts which they contain. The English copy has been carefully revised and corrected, and the work will be found, from the novelty of its matter and on other accounts, exceedingly entertaining."
